Introduction

Approximately 44 cities and towns in India are covered under City Gas Distribution System presently. In order to facilitate the expansion of cleaner fuel, the Government has allocated 100% domestic gas supply for City Gas Usage. PNGRB contemplated a phased roll-out for development of city gas networks in the areas where gas and natural gas pipeline connectivity is available. These geographical areas will include the proximate small town or village. Under the bid round ( 5th & 6th ), PNGRB is likely to roll out City Gas Distribution Network in 46 new districts in 2015-2016. Further GAIL has announced its intent to establish a City Gas Distribution (CGD) network in Patna and Gaya during the first phase of its Haldia - Jagdishpur 'energy highway' gas pipeline project as part of Government's projection of CGD network in 200+ cities in another 5 Years.

Prioritising the CGD sector for gas allocation and the latest announcements of network roll out plans have enthused the investors and new entrants. However, there remain the operational challenges like hurdles to lay pipelines in crowded localities, current regulatory and policy dynamics and pricing. These factors have been contributing to the sectors failure.

In the event of successful execution of the projected growth, a phenomenal task in terms of infrastructure and resources need to be marshalled in the coming years. These highlights have mandated certain activities like need for creating vast CGD network with accelerated pace, developing CGD specific safety standards, monitoring the implementation of safety standards by an independent agency, gas allocation to the CGD entities which are not the gas producers & its pricing, pipeline connectivity from pipeline providers etc.

Diligentia Services, has taken a proactive step and is coming up with a one day Conference on City Gas Distribution which is scheduled on 31st July 2015, New Delhi with the aim of addressing the issues most favourably the Regulatory Environment, Prioritisation & The imperatives, Infrastructure development and scrutinising the opportunities of the sector by bringing the Industry stalwarts, Policy makers and participating audience together on a common platform. It is proposed to compend the deliberations and forwards the same to the Ministry for its view.
